

Dear

I hope this note finds you well.

You're hearing from me this evening because you are on my list of originals collectors.

This is an advance notice about the availability of a new oil painting from me called Crossed Paths. It won't be released publicly until this Saturday at 11 a.m., but is in my gallery if you'd like to see it in real life beforehand.

Because this is a digital image and is being filtered through this email program and you're looking at it on another device or monitor whose colors may vary, the image above (and a second one below) will not be true to what you see in real life, but will give a general impression.

I did a lot of underpainting to give Crossed Paths more dimension and make it do just what it is doing ~ changing color as light changes around it and as you move around it.

I hope you'll come see it in person. Prints will be available possibly as soon as Saturday in a very small edition.

This is a 30" x 40" gallery wrapped painting (image continues around the 1.25" sides). If you'd like more info, just reply to this email. I'm writing its story and will post it on my website in the originals section soon.

Thank you for looking. Enjoy.

Ellen

